WHAT WAS BUILT, AND WHAT COMES NEXT

The stage the twist deserves.

Prepared for Bernette Turbinton, Executive Chef, Owner and Founder
Hibachi With A Twist, Houston, Texas

What this is

This document sets out the work Five Points has built for Hibachi With A Twist. It names what the new site holds, what comes with it, what it costs and how the last few steps run.

Most studios send a paper like this before any work begins. This one arrives late, and on purpose. You came back to this studio a second time, knowing already what the business needed, so the building started early and moved quickly. You have seen the result on the private review link.

So read this as a map rather than a pitch. It puts the whole job in one place, in plain words, so nothing about the work or the cost has to be remembered from a phone call.

You cook in front of people. The fire is the show, the twist is the signature, and the proof is already in the room every time the grill lights. What has been missing is the stage before the show – the place where the next corporate client decides you are the one, and where a family planning a birthday sees the flame long before they smell it.

What was built

A website made for this kitchen alone, not a template wearing your colours. The pages, the accounts and the keys all belong to the business. Nothing here is rented, and no outside company holds it.

The house

7

PAGES, EACH BUILT FOR THIS KITCHEN

- A home page carrying your own photography and film
- Six menu pages: proteins, sides, appetizers, desserts, drinks and complimentary drinks
- Prices held to the estimator and the menu documents, never loose on a page
- The corporate proof named and placed: Harris Health, and the Office of Commissioner Rodney Ellis

The rules

6

BUSINESS RULES THE
BOOKING FORM ENFORCES

- Protein pricing per person, at one, two or three
- The flat rate for children aged four to twelve
- Half deposit beyond 10 business days, the full amount inside them
- A flat $50 travel fee from 20 miles, and more beyond 40
- The specialty roster offered by invitation, never listed as a menu item
- Corporate secured on a purchase order rather than a deposit

The reach

12

CITIES NAMED IN THE SERVICE AREA

- Structured data on every page, so search engines and answer engines read the business correctly
- Crawl and sitemap files, and a share image for every page
- The travel boundary written into the data, matching the estimator exactly
- Built to load fast on a phone as well as a desktop

ALSO DONE SINCE YOU SAW THE REVIEW LINK

The photographs and films you sent were placed: the Harris Health celebration and the service for the Office of Commissioner Rodney Ellis now stand as corporate proof on the home page, with four more scenes added to the gallery. The Asian Spiced Gumbo came off the menu at your word. The travel fee was set at a flat $50 from 20 miles. The opening film was rebuilt from your own landscape footage so it runs smoothly on a phone as well as a desktop. A full search foundation went in across all seven pages. None of it changed the price.

What comes with it, and what it costs

WHAT COMES WITH IT

Two full rounds of changes. 30 days of support after the site goes live. A training session, so your team can edit the site without calling a developer. The first three months of hosting and care, worth $1,500.

THE STAFF PORTAL

A second body of work, asked for after the site was built and delivered inside the same commission. Your chefs and servers sign in at a private address, see the events that need covering and claim them first come, first served. Every shift shows its own pay, computed from your ladder rather than typed in by hand, and you post the work from the same screen. It is closed to everyone but the people you name.

THE COMMISSION

$7,500, once.

One price, covering the website and the portal together. There is no retainer, no renewal and nothing that bills quietly in the background.

$7,500, due on receipt, in one payment. There is no second instalment and nothing falls due later.

WHAT THE BUSINESS OWNS

The site, the pages and the keys pass to you at handoff. The code, the domain and every account sit in the name of the business. The studio keeps working at no extra cost until the site does what this document says it does.

How this finishes

THE LAST STEPS, DRAWN AS ONE LINE

1

SAY THE WORD

Nothing is needed to start but your go-ahead. The studio handles every part of it that does not need a chef.

2

THE LAST DETAILS AND THE KEYS

Three things still need your hands. The business account for card payments, so deposits land in your name from the first booking. The calendar, and where booking requests should arrive. A proper portrait session, which the site is already built to hold.

3

THE MOVE, THEN THE HANDOFF

The web address moves off the old template site in whichever week suits you, and the new one goes live at hibachiwithatwist.com. The codes on the printed menus are reissued to match. The handoff follows.

You built this business by turning up and cooking in front of people, where the work is seen as it happens. The studio holds itself to that same standard. If anything here reads wrong, say so plainly – the kitchen should recognise itself in every line.
