

SPECIMEN 01 · FACET

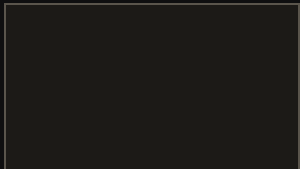

SPECIMEN 02 · FACET

MARQUE PRESENTATION FRAMEWORK SPECIMEN

FIVE POINTS DIGITAL STUDIO
DECATUR, GEORGIA

Built once,
owned for life,
compounding.

SPECIMEN 03 · FACET

SPECIMEN 04 · FACET

THE HOUSE

A

Five Points builds the personal infrastructure of singular minds – owned operating systems that compound, commissioned to marque standard.

B

The marque presentation is the instrument of the spoken argument – every deck the house shows a principal descends from this framework.

Contents

PART ONE · THE FRAMEWORK

The argument	04
The grammar	05
The declaration	06

PART TWO · THE PRACTICE

The derivations	08
The gates	09
The close	10

A document system, not a document.

Most operations run on systems built for the company they used to be. The gap is the most expensive line on a ledger no one keeps.

The Letterpress cut the client journey into 16 instruments, and this deck is the first – the framework every presentation the studio gives descends from. An instance is a fill-and-render exercise, never a fresh design engagement.

Assets, not services. Infrastructure, not deliverables. Built once, owned for life, compounding every quarter.

12 components govern 10 sheets. One voice speaks per document. Two registers – bone and ink – carry the rhythm, and the serif, the grotesque and the mono each hold their own office.

The work begins with one question – why is it still done this way?

THE HOUSE

A commission of Five Points Digital Studio.

Bespoke operating infrastructure for singular minds – mapped, commissioned and compounded.

01

The grammar

Assembled, never composed.

Every sheet is assembled from named components – the running head, the ghost line, the action card – so no instance begins from a blank page.

The running head carries the house, the document and the folio. The ghost line withholds the second thought at a whisper. The action card closes every chapter with an invitation rather than a summary.

Change the copy and the components hold their stations; the grid does not renegotiate itself per instance.

FIGURE 02 · THE COMPONENT MAP

A derivation takes the components it needs and leaves the rest – cohesive with its siblings, never identical to them.

THE GRAMMAR

Commission the next step.

Derive a sibling document from this grammar in an afternoon.

EVERY BUILD

LEAVES AN ASSET

Built once, owned for life.

EVERY ASSET

COMPOUNDS EVERY QUARTER

Map it, commission it, compound it.

LEAVING

The framework

ENTERING

The practice

THE GRAMMAR HOLDS – THE PRACTICE VARIES

04

The derivations

Cohesive, never identical.

15 sibling instruments inherit these components across the client journey, from the survey report to the operations manual.

Each derivation names the components it takes – a report leans on the chapter spread, a certificate on the closing word, a governance review on the quote page.

The voice rotates per document; the family never mixes on one surface.

FIGURE 03 · THE DERIVATION TREE

The ink register carries the ceremonial half of any document that turns.

THE DERIVATIONS

Commission the next step.

The next instrument of the slate derives from this grammar.

A template that believes its own argument does not re-argue it from scratch.

THE HOUSE • PROPOSAL DOCTRINE

The studio argument is the same for every singular mind it serves; only the evidence changes per principal. So the canon stays fixed in the framework and the slots carry what varies.

The gates hold the rest – overflow, punctuation, runts and serif discipline are checked on every render, and nothing ships with a slot left unfilled.

Owned.

The last word.

Every commission leaves the owner holding the keys – the system, the book of it and the leverage it compounds.

The framework ships gated. A sheet that overflows refuses to render; a document that breaks the conventions refuses to send.

Nothing leaves the house below the marque standard, and nothing asks the operator to re-litigate design to hold that standard.

THE COMMISSION

Commission a build.

fivepoints.studio · commission a build